

Esther Davis Scholarship

Communications Department

University of La Verne

A prestigious honor offered by the Communications Department, the scholarship is named on behalf of the founder of the department, Dr. Esther Davis.

Dr. Davis began the program in 1975 and brought with the curriculum a level of professionalism that reflects to this day in the department's programs. Among her many accomplishments are the start of La Verne Magazine, the radio, television and speech programs. Dr. Davis moved the Campus Times from an extracurricular publication to a professional publication.

Criteria

The following criteria will be used in determining the recipient(s) of the Esther Davis Scholarship:

The scholarship shall be awarded to a student majoring in Journalism, Broadcasting or Communications, and who has at least two semesters of full-time status remaining. The scholarship shall be used to supplement non-tuition expenses for the recipient(s). The recipient(s) shall be selected by the faculty of the Communications Department and will be based on the student's commitment, involvement and academic success in the Communications Department. The Department may choose, at its discretion, to select a single person or multiple scholarship recipients.

Application Process

Students must submit the attached application, a 250-300 word typed, double-spaced essay explaining the student's involvement in and contribution to the Communications Department, with particular respect to academic achievements and involvement in departmental activities, and an updated resume as part of the application packet.

The application packet must be submitted to Malissa Hernandez or Eric Borer in ACB 107, no later than 5 p.m., May 2, 2018.

The scholarship recipient(s) will be announced at the department's annual awards reception.
